

PLANE SIGHTED
OVER ENGLAND, THOUGHT TO BE
BABY CLIPPER

Ship Circles Coast Guard Station at Saint Bees, Gets Ground Signal and Proceeds South Along Coast.

SEEN EARLIER OVER
IRELAND, SCOTLAND

Craft Believed to Be That of Thomas H. Smith, Who Left Old Orchard Beach, Me., on Atlantic Flight.

LONDON, May 29 (AP).—The British Press Association reported tonight that a plane believed to be Thomas H. Smith's "Baby Clipper" was sighted off Saint Bees in Cumberland County, Northern England, about 5:30 p. m. (11:30 St. Louis time).

The plane circled over the coast guard station where it was given a ground signal and made off south, keeping to the coast line.

Saint Bees is in a direct line from Western Scotland, where a previous report said a plane like Smith's was seen.

The plane, flying high, was seen over Wigtown-shire, on the western tip of Scotland, at 4:15 p. m. (10:15 a. m. St. Louis time). It was about three miles inland, was headed for England and came from the direction of Ireland.

Nearly two hours earlier a high-flying airplane was seen passing over Londonderry, Northern Ireland, in the direction of England.

It was seen by hundreds who had been scanning clear skies for Smith's 470-pound, one-engine plane which took off from Old Orchard Beach, Me., yesterday and was expected to reach the Irish coast about 4 p. m. (10 a. m. St. Louis time) today.

Flyer Took Off Yesterday Morning

From Old Orchard Beach, Me. OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., May 29 (AP).—Thomas H. Smith, 24-year-old flyer, took off in a four-cylinder plane from Old Orchard Beach, Me., yesterday morning at 11:15 a. m. (St. Louis time). The plane, the Baby Clipper, a 470-pound Aeromac monoplane with a 65-horsepower motor, carried 160 gallons of gasoline, which Smith estimated would carry him 3600 miles in from 32 to 40 hours, barring bad weather. His plane's cruising speed is 100 miles an hour.

Fog and Rain Along Route. Fog and rain clamped a low ceiling over the first third of his route. No word came of the tiny ship's passage over Newfoundland, but at Saint John, N. S., airport officials heard a plane they thought might be Smith's.

Smith, a former transport pilot, had equipment for blind flying, if necessary, but no radio. His only means of communication consisted of three canvas message bags he hoped to drop to ships at sea. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Smith expressed themselves as "amazed" when news of their son's solo take-off reached them at Clarksville, W. Va. "We had no advance notice," said the father, a lawyer. Neither did the Civil Aeronautics Authority, officials said at Washington, adding they had given no permission to the flight, which Smith said was to demonstrate the practicality of long-distance flying by light planes. Associates estimated Smith's fuel cost at less than $30.

Charles Deland, Cincinnati, one of the associates who helped Smith prepare secretly near here for the flight, said weather reports indicated good conditions over much of the "Great Circle" course Smith was to follow.

Most recent of the many airmen who have set out on that trail was Charles Bachman, unreported on a solo hop to Sweden in a plane not much larger than Smith's.

60 Well-Wishers at Takeoff. With the first light of dawn breaking over the tide-hardened sands, Smith lifted his plane into the Atlantic yesterday with his flares and flashlights of new photographers lighted his path and

QUINTUPLETS' BEST BIRTHDAY
GIFT IS A RABBIT'S FOOT

Girls, 5, Most Thrilled by Good Luck Charm—Presents From All Parts of World.

CALLANDER, Ontario, May 29.—Gifts and greetings showered on the Dionne quintuplets on their fifth birthday yesterday but none thrilled them so much as a neatly wrapped rabbit's foot, sent by an American well-wisher. The good luck charm was among packages received from all parts of the world.

The rabbit's foot came from Alameda, Cal., and bore a card with the inscription "this should bring you luck." The quintuplets' nurses had to explain its meaning, but when they caught on their faces beamed.

Special mail service was necessary to deliver the flood of parcels, cards and letters. The bulk of the mail came from the United States.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo, who has attended the girls since their birth, said his charges reached their fifth birthday "happier and sturdier than they have ever been." Dr. Dafeo is 56 years old today.

To celebrate their birthday, the quintuplets—Emilie, Yvonne, Cecile, Marie and Annette—played hostesses to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, and two brothers and a sister.

ALASKAN VOLCANO ERUPTS.
UNALASKA FEELS TREMORS

Earth Shocks 350 Miles Away Believed Traceable to Activity of Mount Veniaminof.

UNALASKA, Alaska, May 29 (AP).—Mount Veniaminof, about 350 miles northeast of here, was reported in violent eruption today. Strong earth shocks, felt here at 9:15 p. m. Sunday, were believed traceable to the eruption, which has been in progress since May 25 but was first reported today.

The eruption was described as the most spectacular on the Alaska peninsula in more than 10 years. Flashes and ashes spurted from the volcano at regular intervals.

Capt. Leadbetter of the light-house tender Cedar radioed the Weather Bureau in Juneau that ashes were falling 35 miles south of the mountain.

Residents of the district were prepared to flee.

The earth shocks here were of 90-second duration. Chandeliers swayed and the cutter Hermes rocked heavily in the harbor but there was no serious damage.

12-YEAR-OLD GIRL WINS
NATIONAL SPELLING BEE

Elizabeth Rice, Worcester, Mass., Takes First; Boy Goes Down on Word "Homogeneity."

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—Elizabeth Rice, 12-year-old Worcester (Mass.) girl, won first prize of $500 in the fifteenth annual national spelling bee today.

The winner, who went to the regional spelling bee at Rochester on a stretcher and placed fourth last year, clinched the 1939 title by spelling "canonical."

The runner-up was Humphrey Cook, 13 years old, of Richmond, Va., who went out on the word "homogeneity."

TAXING SECURITIES
BY MORE THAN ONE
STATE SUSTAINED

U. S. Supreme Court Rules Death Levies Apply Both in Place of Domicile and Where Intangibles Are.

DECISIONS GIVEN
BY JUSTICE STONE

Tribunal Postpones for One Week Action on Mayor Hague of Jersey City.

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—The Supreme Court ruled today that death taxes may be imposed on intangible property (securities) both by a State in which the deceased person had his domicile and by other states where the property is kept.

The 5-to-4 ruling was delivered in two cases by Justice Stone.

The litigation directly involved controversies between New York and Colorado and between Alabama and Tennessee.

"It is undeniable," Justice Stone said, "that the states domiciled in are not deprived, by the taxpayers' activities elsewhere, of its constitutional jurisdiction to tax, and consequently that there are many circumstances in which more than one state may have jurisdiction to impose a tax and measure it by some or all of the taxpayer's intangibles."

The Court postponed until next Monday action on litigation involving whether Mayor Frank Hague had violated the constitutional right of the state of New Jersey to tax meetings in Jersey City, N. J. The Court announced definitely that it would adjourn for the summer next Monday.

Ruling on New Jersey Case. In another tax decision, the Court sustained the imposition of property tax on a person in New Jersey, N. J., on intangible property owned by three insurance companies incorporated in New Jersey, but having their principal business offices in New York.

Justice Stone delivered the opinion, to which no dissent was announced immediately. He said: "When a state exercises its sovereign power to create a private corporation, that corporation becomes a citizen of that state for the jurisdiction of its creator. There it must dwell. The dominion of the state over its creature is complete."

In a decision delivered by Chief Justice Hughes, the court ruled that Marie Elizabeth Elg of Mount Kisco, Westchester County, N. Y., had not lost her United States citizenship. This ruling confirmed an opinion by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

The Labor Department had threatened to deport Miss Elg as an alien. She was born in New York City in 1907 after her father became a naturalized citizen, in 1911 she was taken by her mother to Sweden where she lived until 21 years old.

Miss Elg's father returned to Sweden in 1922 and, Secretary Perkins contended, voluntarily relinquished his American citizenship. This, the department argued, made her an alien.

VANDENBERG WILL LEAD G.O.P. IN '40 'IF PEOPLE INSIST'

Not Pursuing Presidency, but Will Accept Nomination If Offered With One Term Limit.

FOR UNITING EFFORT 'TO SAVE AMERICA'

Advocate of Coalition Would Court Conservative Democrats — to Seek Senate Re-Election.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan announced today that while he would not pursue the presidential nomination for himself, he would not decline it if chosen by the 1940 Republican national convention.

He also announced he would seek re-election to the Senate, but this is not in conflict with his presidential candidacy. The national convention will be held a month or more before the closing date for filing in the Michigan senatorial primaries. Should he win the presidential nomination he could withdraw from the Senate contest.

The statute Michigan Senator introduced a novel feature in confining Republican presidential race by virtually pledging himself in advance to seek only one term.

Advocate of Coalition.

Long an advocate of a coalition between Republicans and conservative Democrats, Vandenberg said today his party "must strive to create common ground upon which all like-thinkers may unite to produce an administration for all Americans in which a pre-pledged one-term President is manifestly free of all incentive but the job of saving America."

Vandenberg made his announcement in a reply to Gov. Dickinson and Representative Mapes, who had led Michigan officials in urging him to become a presidential candidate. It is known that he went against the advice of his most influential supporters when he publicly insisted that the next Republican nominee should not attempt to succeed himself if elected.

His conviction on the "one term" pronouncement arises from a belief that it is vital to a successful Republican administration from 1941 to 1945. He has told friends that regardless of the presidential result the Democrats are certain to retain a majority in the Senate until the 1942 election. Therefore, he has explained, it is essential that a Republican President gain the wholehearted support of a sufficient number of conservative Democrats to give him a working majority in the upper chamber. To accomplish this, he said, he must absorb himself and his administration in the suspicion of playing for future political advantage.

Defeated Florida Canal.

In the Senate, Vandenberg has demonstrated on several occasions, notably in the defeat of the President's Florida ship canal project, that he personally can secure the cooperation of conservative Democrats. His success along these lines will make it difficult for his Republican opponents to meet this argument for a one-term pledge.

As is customary for candidates a year before the conventions, Vandenberg was careful to insist that he would not actively seek the nomination.

"It is for the people themselves to speak," he said. "No man understanding its difficulties and responsibilities could covet the presidency, and no American could decline it if chosen."

His other utterances conformed to the political proprieties. "Words," he said, "fail to express my gratitude for this expression of confidence. I shall hope to proceed with whatever responsibilities lie ahead in the most efficient manner. At the moment, these responsibilities require me to announce that I shall be a candidate to succeed myself in the United States Senate. If there are subsequent responsibilities of a broader nature, I shall meet them to the best of my ability."

To Save American System.

"You are good enough to credit me with sincerity in asserting that the next Republican presidential nomination transcends all ordinary questions. The next Republican national convention must first set down clean-cut, constructive, courageous principles which dependably promise to save the American system of free enterprise under the renewed spirit of constitutional democracy, and to restore prosperity for our whole people under Government restored to solvency. Then it should fit its nominations to its principles."

"In my view, it must strive to create common ground upon which all like-thinkers may unite to produce an administration for all Americans in which a pre-pledged, one-term President is manifestly free of all incentive, but the one job of saving America. In my view, the nominations should flow from the deliberative judgment of a convention wholly free to search out the wisest, surest answers to these critical problems."

"Holding this deep conviction, it

BANK DEPOSITS SHOWN AT TRIAL OF MANTON

FBI Agent Compares Alleged Go-Between's Account With Former Judge's.

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP).—The Government sought to show in United States District Court today that money from a litigant before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals eventually found its way to companies controlled by former United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton.

Manton is on trial charged with conspiracy to obstruct justice. Co-defendants George M. Spector, was named by the Government as the go-between in the passage of funds from litigant to Manton.

Government witnesses have testified that $27,500 was advanced to Spector from corporations controlled by the late Archie M. Andrews. Andrews, named in the indictment as a co-conspirator, won an appeal to the Circuit Court in a patent infringement case.

John T. Cahill, United States Attorney, told the court the Government could not trace all the money but alleged that a substantial part of it reached corporations controlled by Manton.

Carl A. Herring, a special Federal Bureau of Investigation agent and expert accountant, testified from bank records to the intricate financial transactions in which Spector engaged.

The Government contended these transactions were to Manton's ultimate benefit.

Herring testified Spector's account rose as he received funds from Andrews' controlled firms and dropped off in nearly identical amounts—mostly of $5000 items, as loans were made to corporations controlled by Manton—specifically the National Cellulose Corporation.

MONOPOLY COMMITTEE HALTS BANKING INQUIRY UNTIL FALL

One Phase of Study of Insurance Companies to Be Taken Up June 5.

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—Chairman O'Mahoney (Dem., Wyo.) said last night the Monopoly Committee would pursue its inquiry into investment banking practices next fall, immediately after hearing a study of private placement of savings.

O'Mahoney issued a statement explaining postponement of the bank inquiry in which he said his announcement of the action Wednesday led to reports that gave "undue importance to a simple administrative detail" in scheduling hearings.

"The truth of the matter," he said, "is that numerous phases of the broad scope of the committee's hearings are about ready for presentation and the committee is faced with the problem of allotting time to several inquiries."

"Congressional members who have numerous legislative duties to perform in what may now be the closing weeks of Congress welcomed this week's recess."

The committee will take up one phase of its study of insurance companies June 5.

SOCIAL SECURITY GRANTS

Missouri to Get $65,240 for Jobless Compensation Office
KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 29.—Ed McDonald, Social Security Administration regional director, said today the following grants had been approved for Missouri: Unemployment Compensation Administration, $65,240; Employment Service, $52,98.

would be wholly out of character for me personally to pursue the nomination for myself. It is for the people themselves to speak. No man understanding its difficulties and responsibilities could covet the presidency; and no American could decline it if chosen."

Plane Sighted Over England Thought to Be 'Baby Clipper'

group of 50 well-wishers cheered him on.

"Europe is as close as I can tell you," Smith said of his destination. Smith's plotted course took him up the Maine coast, Newfoundland, and whence he would turn into the Great Circle route.

Smith stowed away in his tiny cockpit four sandwiches, a couple of chocolate bars and two thermos bottles, one containing water and the other a soft drink for refreshment. In his emergency kit he had first-aid materials, a knife, revolver and roll of mosquito netting—the latter in case of a forced landing on the Northern Atlantic coastal wilderness. His tool kit was stripped down to a screwdriver and a single wrench.

Formerly on St. Louis Line. A flyer of nine years' experience, Smith formerly lived in Clarksburg, W. Va., and had been a pilot for a St. Louis, Cincinnati and Detroit line.

Last fall, he helped to set a light plane endurance mark of 218 hours, 23 minutes over Rossmore Dry Lake near Los Angeles, Cal. With two Long Beach (Cal.) pilots, Smith kept the plane in the air nearly 10 days until forced down by a leaking fuel tank.

Several times, one of the pilots would leave the plane by a parachute, rest and board again by catching a suspended ladder from a speeding automobile.

Instructor Says Flyer Plans to Return by Southern Route.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 29 (AP).—Thomas H. Smith carries an itinerary which will take him to Slynge Head, Ireland, and back to this country by a South Atlantic crossing, his navigating instructor said yesterday.

Charles A. Zweng, representative of a navigation school here, said Smith came to him last winter in Ireland, Cal. and asked him to map out the flight. Zweng said he came East two weeks ago at Smith's request and checked the weather in the New York Weather Bureau. He said Saturday was the first suitable day for a take-off and he notified Smith, warning him to stop in Newfoundland if he found skies overcast.

Smith was through here about 10 days ago on an airline, Kratz said, "and I thought he must have had something like this in mind. He was very mysterious and obviously had something big he was going to do. All he would say, however, was that he had some special work in the East."

Kratz said he was nevertheless surprised when he learned of the flight.

"Smith always was a good pilot," he said, "and had a great deal of good common sense." He described Smith as eager and amiable, "a hell of a good guy."

but carries on business in another is subject to a tax there measured by the value of the intangibles used in his business."

Chief Justice Hughes wrote the dissenting opinion in the New York Colorado case, contending that the majority decision went to an "unwarranted extreme and thus unjustly produces an unjust result."

"This is the first dissent written by the Chief Justice in at least two years."

Facts in Two Cases at Issue. The New York-Colorado case involved the question of whether New York could collect an estate tax on securities held in trust for a New Yorker by the Denver National Bank. The State sought to collect $36,716 on the estate of Mrs. Katherine H. Brown, who died in 1931 while a resident of New York. She had established a $265,767 trust in 1924 while a resident of Denver. Colorado already has collected a $15,653 transfer tax.

In a decision March 13 the Court held that Massachusetts was Green's legal domicile.

Dissenters to the New York-Colorado and Alabama-Tennessee decisions were Chief Justice Hughes and Justices McReynolds, Butler and Roberts.

Apparently Justice Douglas cast the deciding vote. The litigation was reargued after he took his seat on the bench.

"Shares of corporate stock," Justice Stone said, "may be taxed at the domicile of the shareholder and also at that of the corporation, which the taxing state has created and controls; and income may be taxed both by the state where it is earned and by the state of the recipient's domicile."

"Protection, benefit and power over the subject matter are not confined to either state. The taxpayer who is domiciled in one state

SQUALUS SALVAGE PLAN CHANGED DUE TO EXTREME COLD

Sunken Submarine Will Be Towed to Shallower and Warmer Water Before It Is Raised.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., May 29 (AP).—Forced into new salvage plans by the extreme cold of the ocean water 15 miles off this port, navy officials announced late today the sunken submarine Squalus would be taken to shallower and warmer water.

As Navy technicians contemplated moving the Squalus in three shifts, divers announced a messenger line had been successfully placed beneath the air-filled bow of the submarine in the first step of the new move. By means of the line a heavy chain will be pulled under the bow. With the messenger line in place, operations were suspended temporarily.

Full details of the new operations were not immediately announced, but it was indicated the sunken vessel would be made buoyant enough to be dragged nearer shore, where the final lifting would be carried out.

All day hands of divers working 24 feet beneath the surface were numbed by the cold water and air-lines continued to freeze in the low temperature. A shift in wind brought intermittent fog in from the sea.

Special Memorial Services.

Divers May Enter Squalus. Twelve gas masks were put aboard the rescue ship Falcon today, indicating the probability salvagers might enter the Squalus by way of the escape chamber at normal pressure.

Commander A. E. Stone, navy chaplain, announced today special Memorial day services for the 20 victims would be held tomorrow.

After the regular Decoration day exercises, held annually, the 33 survivors and relatives of the Squalus' dead will assemble in the Portsmouth Navy Yard auditorium, N. H., for the ceremony.

Portsmouth, special prayers and benediction will be included in the service.

Constantly active for the welfare of the widows and families of the drowned men, Commander Stone said an office was being set up in his quarters, in conjunction with the Red Cross, so that relatives might file claims against the Government for burial expenses and pensions. Five or six widows already have filed claims. Relatives in Stockton, Calif., might file their claims with their local Red Cross office.

Officials are studying written reports of the 33 survivors of the Squalus' dive last Tuesday.

Asserting each one of the men rescued by the Squalus' crew had written his story of the tragedy, Lieutenant-Commander John B. Longstaff said "the purpose of these written statements is to get a permanent record of the men's versions of the disaster early before minor events are forgotten."

"Sometimes," he said, "these minor events are the key to the solution. The commanding officer is also preparing his official report to the Navy Department."

Survivors Back on Duty. Longstaff said the commandant of the Navy Yard here, one of those rescued when the submarine S-5 sank in 1920, said all the Squalus survivors were back on active duty.

After the sinking of the Squalus was discovered, navy officials expressed the belief the sea rushed into the submarine through an open air induction valve, plunging the undersea craft 240 feet to the ocean floor. Later, however, a rescued crew member said warning lights indicated all valves were closed when the craft submerged.

Officials were confident that, once the $4,000,000 Squalus was raised from its bed of mud and in drydock, the cause of the accident would be learned.

3 GET YALE FELLOWSHIPS. St. Louis County Students Among 162 Recipients.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 29.—Three St. Louis County (Mo.) students among the 162 recipients of the Yale University fellowships and scholarships in the graduate school of Yale University, it was announced yesterday.

They are David Tredway Graham, Clayton, fellowship for study in psychology; Cleo Maude Parsley, University City, general studies; and Charles Clark Robinson Jr., Maplewood, transportation.

In this connection Judge Stone asked both the insurance department and the companies for their views.

U. S. Court Calls Back $8,000,000

Judge Otis last week received the guilty pleas of Pendergast and O'Malley and imposed their sentences for evading income taxes on their loot from the compromise deal.

The Court directed Judge Charles L. Hanson, counsel for the insurance department, who filed the motion in Lucas' behalf, to prepare a formal draft of the order by Thursday. After the companies answer the show cause order by June 15, the Court will hold a hearing June 19 on any issues that are raised.

The 137 insurance companies were represented today by William Marshall Bullitt of Louisville, Ky., former Solicitor-General of the United States under the administration of President Taft.

He was introduced to the Court by Robert J. Folonise, chief counsel for the companies in the rate litigation.

Willing to Do Anything. Bullitt told the court the companies were willing to do anything, "to pay back the money or do anything else the Court desires in the matter." He declared the companies "did not want to stand on anything involved in the matter on which O'Malley was paid money."

The first information received by the companies that O'Malley received any money or that any other payments were made in connection with the compromise, Bullitt said, was when the Federal grand-jury investigation was made recently, resulting in the indictments of Pendergast and O'Malley. He said he had advised the companies to do whatever the Court considered proper in disposition of the matter.

Order to Milligan. In directing Milligan to take action against any persons guilty of foisting the "so-called fraudulent settlement" on the court, Judge Stone said: "Under the statutes of this country, the act of foisting on the administration of justice in a Federal Court."

"We wish Mr. Milligan, if he finds sufficient grounds to suppose that any individual has attempted to obstruct justice in this court by foisting on the court a settlement fraudulently obtained, that he will present these matters to the grand jury."

"Second, if he finds sufficient grounds for doing so, after his investigation or on his own knowledge of the facts, that he will cause to be filed in this court contempt proceedings against any persons connected with foisting an improper agreement on this court."

Milligan, who was in the courtroom, told the court his office was willing at all times to carry out the wishes of the court, and would carry out its order.

Without calling him by name, Milligan indicated, however, that there might be some question as to whether A. L. McCormack, St. Louis insurance executive, who acted as "go-between" in the slush fund payments to Pendergast and O'Malley to obtain the compromise, would be available as a witness in any proceeding such as called for by the Court.

Milligan said "this witness," later identified by his staff as McCormack, had been a key witness in the Federal grand jury investigation of the slush fund payments and would have been available as a witness if it had been necessary to hold trials on the indictments obtained. These were the indictments of Pendergast and O'Malley for income tax evasion on the $377,500 they received for O'Malley's approval of the settlement.

Necessary as Witness. However, Milligan said he was not certain the witness would be available as a witness in the proposed prosecutions, as he himself would be involved in the cases. "This is one witness who must be available to make successful such a prosecution," Milligan said. He added that he understood the "witness" was not in good health.

While the Court ordered the restoration of the impounded funds which went to the companies, and directed them to show cause why this money should not be returned in its entirety to the policyholders, and the question dismissed, the Court's action did not entirely close the question of whether the 137 separate injunction suits in the rate litigation might later be revived.

In this connection Judge Stone asked both the insurance department and the companies for their views.

position in the matter, apparently for later guidance of the court in any final action it takes in that respect.

He asked Hanson if he thought the motion presented raised issues which, in the situation, would enable the court to order the return of the funds to the policyholders without any further action as to the merits of the issues in the rate cases which were terminated by the compromise.

Hanson expressed the view the rate cases were at an end and could not be revived, having been dismissed without a judgment, under the compromise, and the injunction bond sureties in the cases discharged.

He said the companies, having entered into the compromise and bribery of an officer of the State, "were not in court with clean hands" and not in a position "ever to open up the rate cases again."

Judge Stone said two possible situations were presented, one in which the money might be returned by the companies to the custodian of the fund, and the decrees approving the companies in each of the 137 separate suits be set aside. The cases then would be back where they were before the compromise—pending on the merits of the rate controversy.

The other situation, he said, was if the evidence in the proceeding should be such as in the minds of the court would justify a dismissal of the cases on the ground of imposition on the court of a fraudulent character. While he did not rule on these points, he said the matter should "be met directly and once and for all."

Position of Companies. Bullitt, in reply to a question by Judge Stone as to the position of the companies, said the companies wanted to restore to the fund the money they had received, if the Court desired, and then determine the final disposition of the money.

However, Bullitt said, the companies were not conceding the slightest that the order should be set aside on account of fraud on the part of the companies, and also were not conceding that the rate suits were wrong or that the insurance rates should not have been raised.

Bullitt said the companies had planned, after the disclosure of bribery, to place the matter in the hands of the court again on their own initiative, but had waited until the income tax evasion cases against Pendergast and O'Malley were disposed of, to avoid any possible interference with those cases.

"I cannot imagine that the companies would consent today to anything based on even the remotest suspicion that they had knowledge that money went to O'Malley," he said.

Approval of Compromise. The three-judge court approved the compromise in February, 1936, on representations by the companies and O'Malley, the official guardian of the rights of the policyholders, that it was an honest, proper and beneficial settlement.

The story of corruption unfolded in Federal Court last week, as has been told, that the late Charles R. Street of Chicago, insurance company executive and head of a committee which carried on the insurance rate litigation for the companies, offered Pendergast $750,000 early in 1935, to use his political influence to bring about the settlement, after conferences to that end which were suggested by O'Malley.

O'Malley entered into the compromise agreement with Street on May 18, 1935. When criticism immediately was centered on the settlement, and the Cole County Circuit Court rejected it in that phase of litigation over the rate increase in the State courts, involving 74 companies, O'Malley said "it is a fine settlement," and defied critics with a declaration "we will go through with it." He did go through with it.

Rejected by State Courts. The compromise was rejected three times in the State courts, position in the matter, apparently for later guidance of the court in any final action it takes in that respect.

He asked Hanson if he thought the motion presented raised issues which, in the situation, would enable the court to order the return of the funds to the policyholders without any further action as to the merits of the issues in the rate cases which were terminated by the compromise.

Hanson expressed the view the rate cases were at an end and could not be revived, having been dismissed without a judgment, under the compromise, and the injunction bond sureties in the cases discharged.

While he did not rule on these points, he said the matter should "be met directly and once and for all."

Position of Companies. Bullitt, in reply to a question by Judge Stone as to the position of the companies, said the companies wanted to restore to the fund the money they had received, if the Court desired, and then determine the final disposition of the money.

However, Bullitt said, the companies were not conceding the slightest that the order should be set aside on account of fraud on the part of the companies, and also were not conceding that the rate suits were wrong or that the insurance rates should not have been raised.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By CHARLES G. ROSS

"Tremendous Issue" Underlies the Question of How Far the Government Should Go With Spending Program—The Problem as Seen by A. A. Berle, a Roosevelt Adviser.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—WHATEVER may be the attitude of the Government—a subject, incidentally, which has been terribly clouded by the oversimplification on both sides—there is food for a lot of sober thinking in the memorandum on capital expenditures placed before the Temporary National Economic Committee last week by A. A. Berle Jr., one of the original group of Roosevelt "brain trusters" and now an Assistant Secretary of State.

Berle's thesis, which is brilliantly worked out, is that private industry is unable to provide a sufficient flow of wealth-producing capital; the Government therefore must do a large share of the job. This is the "coherent philosophy" of spending, as one of Mr. Berle's colleagues in the Government has phrased it, that is now being advanced in place of the earlier "pump-priming" theories. The Berle statement of the case, as it seems to this writer, is that by which proposals of further large-scale extensions of Government credit should stand or fall.

There is, as Mr. Berle says, a "tremendous issue" behind his technical title of "capital credit." He puts the issue this bluntly: "The private financial system as at present constituted does not work. It is, accordingly, to be supplemented by vast amounts of Federal credit which make up in some measure, but inadequately, for the difficulties in the existing system of private finance. Use of the Federal credit by providing relief, and by taking care of certain necessary social requirements through public works in a limited field, does keep the economic machinery of the country running, but it is not a permanent solution. There is always the danger that an economy so organized will reach the end of its tether. We should be getting about the process of reorganization now."

Why not? Because "unless there is some distortion such as that which might be caused by a general war... the next major downturn of the business cycle (due in any case within four or five years) might present all the factors for an explosive situation, but it is not the next decade will, I think, probably force a showdown."

The point is made that American private markets are now putting capital funds into capital construction at no more than one-half the rate that obtained in the 1920-1930 decade. Government financing has taken up the slack. This was inevitable, for "irrespective of political complexion, any Government faced with a substantial closing of the capital markets would be forced to take measures to keep the heavy industries and the capital goods markets sufficiently active to provide employment. If the only available method was to attack Government spending as such in this situation is simply to ignore realities."

The real danger from heavy Government expenditure, to create wealth lies not, as Mr. Berle sees it, in any threat to Government credit. He says the danger to Government credit has been wholly overstressed, but lies "elsewhere." Here we begin to see how tremendous is the underlying issue. For the traditional things on which the Government spends money—roads, parks, public buildings and the like—can serve as the market for only a small fraction of the capital goods production of the United States. So, if wealth is to be created by the creation of Government debt, "the Government will have to enter into the direct financing of activities now supposed to be private; and a consequence of that direct financing must mean inevitably that the Government ultimately will control and own those activities." If the Government uses its own credit in this manner at the rate of four billions a year, the Government over a period of years "will gradually take over the productive plants of the United States."

"This," says Mr. Berle, "is certainly so fundamental a change in the course of American life that the decision to make it should be taken for reasons other than relief of a series of temporary difficulties. If the country desires to make wealth creation a function of Government (I personally believe it must do so in larger measure than it has heretofore), the choice should be the considered choice of the country, and not the result of a policy of drift."

The conclusion is drawn that "either we are on the eve of a change in our financial system, or we are on the eve of a change in our social system." Is Mr. Berle advocating Socialism? He says explicitly that he is not, though he confesses he is "frankly biased in favor of public ownership of certain forms of wealth." He says that "country within the next few years will probably be deciding 'whether the Government ought not to own, directly or indirectly, part of the national plant such as railroads, electric power and mineral resources.'"

Whether or not the United States becomes a Socialist country "will be determined partly by economic forces and partly by the thinking and the desires of the country itself." Meantime our system of private enterprise, public enterprise, or a combination of both, and any intermediate forms which may appear."

Mr. Berle cites what has been said in New York Mayor La Guardia, who has been able to "overcome the fears of private interests and put through a large program of useful public works. The result there 'would seem to indicate that an extension of Government creation of wealth is indicated; and that it can be done without danger to our political or social system provided the development is done with honesty and character.'"

We may take it for granted, I think, that whichever party wins the next election, Government spending to supplement private investment—whether it be called "pump priming" or "Government investment"—will continue. The real issue before the country, as Mr. Berle's paper indicates, is one of degree: It is whether or not this spending shall be carried to the point where a new economic system will begin to take the place of one we now have.

Here we begin to see how tremendous is the underlying issue. For the traditional things on which the Government spends money—roads, parks, public buildings and the like—can serve as the market for only a small fraction of the capital goods production of the United States.

So, if wealth is to be created by the creation of Government debt, "the Government will have to enter into the direct financing of activities now supposed to be private; and a consequence of that direct financing must mean inevitably that the Government ultimately will control and own those activities."

If the Government uses its own credit in this manner at the rate of four billions a year, the Government over a period of years "will gradually take over the productive plants of the United States."

"This," says Mr. Berle, "is certainly so fundamental a change in the course of American life that the decision to make it should be taken for reasons other than relief of a series of temporary difficulties. If the country desires to make wealth creation a function of Government (I personally believe it must do so in larger measure than it has heretofore), the choice should be the considered choice of the country, and not the result of a policy of drift."

The conclusion is drawn that "either we are on the eve of a change in our financial system, or we are on the eve of a change in our social system." Is Mr. Berle advocating Socialism? He says explicitly that he is not, though he confesses he is "frankly biased in favor of public ownership of certain forms of wealth."

MUNICIPAL THEATER PERGOLAS DEDICATED

Stone and Concrete Structure Replaces Old Wooden Shelter.

The new pergolas at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park, designed to shelter capacity audiences in the event of rain, were dedicated in ceremonies yesterday.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann presided at the dedication, which was a tribute to the directors of the theater for its successful operation during 20 years. He said that thousands of persons had visited the place to witness the outdoor productions.

Go. Stark, who, with Mrs. Stark, participated in the ceremonies, described the new structure as "a great asset to the city." Mrs. Stark unveiled two tablets bearing the names of leaders of the Municipal Opera and city and State officials.

Henry W. Kiel, president of the Municipal Theater Association, spoke of the outdoor theater as "the cultural and artistic achievement of the people of St. Louis."

Built of Indiana limestone and concrete, the new pergolas replace wooden structures erected when the theater was first opened.

The Municipal Opera ticket office in the lobby of the Arcade Building, Eighth and Olive streets, opened today for sale of seats for all performances.

The first performance of the season, "Rose Marie," starring Nancy Cord and Lansing Hatfield.

The box office will be open daily from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sunday hours are noon to 9 p. m. Beginning Friday, tickets for each evening performance may be obtained at the theater at 7 p. m.

On Sundays the main box office at the lower entrance of the theater will be open from noon to 9 p. m. for sale of tickets for the current show and the following week's production.

"Rose Marie" will be presented 10 nights. The cast and chorus will attend the annual guarantors' dinner Wednesday evening at Hotel Jefferson. A radio network dramatization of the history of Municipal Opera will be presented.

Archbishop to Present PAROCHIAL SCHOOL DIPLOMAS

458 Boys and Girls of Catholic to Receive Them.

Archbishop John J. Glennon will present diplomas to 458 graduates of parochial schools at the twenty-fifth annual commencement exercises in St. Louis Cathedral, 4401 Lindell boulevard, at 4 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

There will be 176 graduates from St. Louis High School, 158 from Rosati-Kain and 114 from South Side Catholic.

The Very Rev. Martin J. O'Malley, president of "Enrich Seminary," will preach the sermon, and the Rev. Alfred G. Thomson, superintendent of parochial schools, will be celebrant at solemn pontifical benediction.

Boys of the graduating classes will assemble at the Cathedral auditorium, girls at Rosati-Kain High School. They will meet at the Cathedral entrance and march down the center aisle.

THOMAS G. PORTIS FUNERAL TO BE AT 2 P. M. WEDNESDAY

Services for Retired Attorney, 84, Will Be Held at 3621 Olive; Burial in Bellefontaine.

Funeral services for Thomas G. Portis, retired attorney, who died yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital of complications from a fractured hip, will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. at Wagoner Mortuary, 3621 Olive street, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Portis, 84 years old, lived at the Parkhurst Hotel. He was a member of an early St. Louis family, as was his wife, Mrs. Susan M. Russell, who died in 1934. Surviving is a sister, Mrs. Louis C. Boislinski.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

Engaged

M. R. AND MRS. HARRY B. MATHEWS of the Hawthorne Fairmount, Alton, are entertaining Mrs. Mathews' cousins, Mrs. William Marriott Tandy and her daughter, Miss Leila of Germantown, Pa. The Tandys who arrived Friday, will be here about two weeks. Parties will be given for them during their visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathews' sub-debutante daughter, Miss Margaret, will arrive home Saturday from the Masters School, Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., where she is a pupil, she is attending a house party near Atlantic City. She will return to Masters next fall for her senior year.

The Mathews family will leave June 25 for Kennebunkport, Me., where they have a house for the season.

Mrs. Charles W. Moore, 36 Portland place, and her daughter, Mrs. Frances, and son, William, will leave tomorrow for Philadelphia to attend the wedding Friday of Miss Louise Vaulain and Joseph Pulitzer Jr. Miss Vaulain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Leonard Vaulain, Haverford, Pa., and Mr. Pulitzer, son of Joseph Pulitzer, of Lone Tree Farm, Pa., will be married at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon at Church of the Redeemer, Bryn Mawr. Mrs. Moore is an aunt of the bridegroom-elect.

Mr. and Mrs. Pulitzer will leave here in the middle of the week as will William Julius Polk Jr. Mr. Pulitzer Jr. departed Friday and until the wedding will be the houseguest of his aunt, Mrs. J. Clifford Rosengarten of Villa Nova, Pa.

Close friends have been told of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Nancy Lucas Blair, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Wilray Papin Blair, and Dr. James Lee O'Leary. The wedding, which only the families are to attend, will take place in June, after which the pair will occupy the apartment of Mrs. Sheila Burlingame, 4501 Maryland avenue, until her return in the fall from a trip to Europe for which she sailed a few days ago.

Yvonne Blair, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Blair gave an informal tea at their home on Old Jamestown road for about 35 guests to celebrate the engagement announcement.

Miss Blair attended the Academy of the Sacred Heart here, and studied for a year in France. She made her debut several years ago at a reception at 5 Kingsbury place, at the former home of Dr. and Mrs. Blair, after which she became a student at Ratcliffe College. She is a member of the Junior League.

Miss Kathryn Lyman Blair is a sister of the bride-elect, and her brothers are Dr. Wilray P. Blair Jr. and John J. B. Blair. Her mother, the former Miss Kathryn L. Johnson, is a granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lucas of the well-known early St. Louis family.

Dr. O'Leary, who makes his home here at 4926 Forest Park boulevard, is the son of Mrs. James O'Leary of San Antonio, Tex. He attended the University of Chicago, where he received his degree in medicine in 1931. He is an associate professor of anatomy at Washington University School of Medicine, where he has been connected since graduation.

Miss Florence Mary Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell Allen, 4516 Maryland avenue, and a prospective debutante of next season, will be a bridesmaid at the wedding of a Wells College senior classmate, Miss Polly Klotz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Klotz of Waban, Mass., and Arthur W. Rice, son of Mrs. Arthur W. Rice of Milton, Mass. The wedding will take place 12 days after graduation exercises at Wells, which will be Saturday, June 24. The wedding will be in the Union Church of Waban.

A reception will be given at the Brookline Country Club.

Mrs. Allen will leave June 8, to attend graduation exercises at Wells College, and will be joined there by another daughter, Miss Ann Russell Allen, a student at Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart. Later the three will visit Mr. Allen's mother, Mrs. William Russell Allen of Pittsfield, Mass., and after that, they plan to visit the New York World's Fair. The family may return home before going to Charlevoix, Mich., to open their cottage for the season.

Mrs. Michael Holby William Bockman of Minneapolis, Minn., is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lansing Prewitt Jr., 5518 Waterman avenue. Mrs. Bockman, the former Miss Julia Wilson of St. Louis, is being entertained informally.

Miss Jessie Jablonsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. Jablonsky, 700 North Price road, whose marriage to George E. Leutwiler will take place Saturday, June 17, was entertained at a shower given Tuesday by Mrs. Harly Hartzog and Mrs. Robert Bopp, at the Hartzog home, 7714 Shirley drive.

The marriage of Miss Jablonsky and her fiancé will take place at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon in the garden of the Jablonsky home. The Rev. Dr. Arnold H. Lowe of Kingshighway Presbyterian Church will perform the ceremony.

Miss Alice Jablonsky will be her sister's maid of honor, and another sister, Miss Florence, and Miss Alma Garrett, a cousin, will be bridesmaids. Nancy Jablonsky, niece of the prospective bride, will be flower girl.

Charles Leutwiler will attend his brother as best man. Ushers are Kenneth Leutwiler, another brother, Miss MILDRED ELLIS, whose engagement to Dr. M. A. Diehr, 5305 Delmar boulevard, was announced last week. The daughter of Mrs. Ella Ellis of Sedgewickville, Mo., Miss Ellis lives at 5621 Enright avenue. The wedding will take place in July.

and Lieut. Harvey Jablonsky, brother of the bride-elect. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Leutwiler, 6949 Cornell avenue.

Invitations have been received from Mr. and Mrs. John Charles Tobin, 5 Kingsbury place, for a reception Saturday night, June 17, at 9 o'clock at Bellevue Country Club. The reception will be in celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Tobin's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Three members of the Villa Duchesne graduating class were hostesses at a bay ride and party last night. Hostesses were Miss Nina Thomas Gleason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Papin Gleason, 415 Wesley avenue, Ferguson; Miss Zoe Valle Rozier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rozier of St. Genevieve, Mo., and Miss Ann Marten of Chicago. The group left at 8 o'clock on hay wagons from The Shack, on the Lackland road, then returned for a late supper.

Invitations have been received for the wedding of Miss Mary Frances Embree, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton J. Embree, 571 Stratford avenue, University Hills, to Alfred C. Alspach of Lancaster, Pa., to take place Thursday, June 15. The wedding will be at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon at First Unitarian Church, with the Rev. Dr. Titus A. Alspach of Lancaster, father of the prospective bridegroom, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Laurence Plank.

Parties in honor of the prospective bride include a luncheon to be given June 10, by Mrs. Thomas J. Kemp, 4 Tuscan Park, and another luncheon given June 13, by Mrs. Royal Coburn, 81 Broadview drive, Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Martin, 22 Joy avenue, Webster Groves, will give the wedding rehearsal dinner at their home Wednesday night, June 14.

The funeral service for Dr. Richard T. Collins, a retired physician, who died Saturday of the infirmities of age, will be held tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at Southern Funeral Home, 6322 South W. Marquette boulevard. Burial will be at St. Matthew's Cemetery.

FATHER J. J. LONERGAN 200 CHOSEN TO ATTEND OF ST. CROWAN'S DIES DR. MAYO'S FUNERAL

Priest Succumbs at 54, a Week After Suffering Heart Attack.

The Rev. John J. Lonergan, pastor of St. Cronan's Catholic Church, 1203 South Boyle avenue, died at St. John's Hospital yesterday following a heart attack suffered between masses at the church a week before. He was 51 years old and had been pastor of St. Cronan's since 1931.

A native of Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland, Father Lonergan came to this country in 1908, studying at Kenrick Seminary, where he was ordained in 1911. He served as assistant pastor at the Holy Cathedral and St. Michael's, New Name and St. Matthew's parishes and as pastor at Chaffee, Mo., before being assigned to St. Cronan's. He was a judge of the diocesan matrimonial court and an examiner of junior clergy.

In 1916, he served on the Mexican border with the old First Infantry, Missouri National Guard. Surviving are a brother, Michael, 4026 North Grand boulevard; a brother, Francis, of Chicago, and three brothers and two sisters in all. Funeral services will be at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning at the church. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

SIDNEY BOLAND SUBLETTE DIES OF HEART DISEASE

One of Heirs Who Lost Suits for 306 Acres in St. Louis Succumbs in Collinsville.

Sidney Boland Sublette, one of the Sublette heirs who lost a 32-year fight for title to 306 acres of land in the southwestern part of St. Louis valued at more than $3,000,000, died of heart disease Saturday at his home in Collinsville, Ill. The funeral will be at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Hoffmeister undertaking establishment, 7814 South Broadway, with burial in Na- Ireland Cemetery, Jefferson. Burial will be at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Hoffmeister undertaking establishment, 7814 South Broadway, with burial in Na- Ireland Cemetery, Jefferson. Burial will be at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday at the Hoffmeister undertaking establishment, 7814 South Broadway, with burial in Na- Ireland Cemetery, Jefferson.

Mr. Sublette, who was 70 years old, had been a railroad machinist in St. Louis, and had lived in Collinsville for the last four years. He served in the Spanish-American War. His wife and a brother survive.

His father, James Garrett Sublette, in 1896 filed suit in St. Louis for the land, contending that his uncle, Solomon Sublette, had left to him and other descendants the tract southwest of Kingshighway boulevard and Manchester avenue. The suit, and another similar action filed later, were decided against the 150 claimants. Exhibit "A" in the suit was a soapbox filled with the bones of Pinkney D. Sublette, trapper and fur trader, which were held in the files of the Circuit Clerk for 38 years.

St. Louis Pastor's Daughter Dies

Mrs. Anna May Nesler, daughter of the Rev. Dr. J. J. Johnson, pastor of Winnebago Presbyterian Church, died at her home in Dubuque, Ia., yesterday after an extended illness. Funeral services will be held in Dubuque at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Mrs. Nesler, who was 42 years old, had lived in Dubuque with her husband, Dr. William M. Nesler, a dentist, for 20 years.

Dr. D. Clay Lilly Dies

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., May 29 (AP).—Dr. D. Clay Lilly, moderator of the 1937 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern), died at his home at Reynolds, near here. Dr. Lilly, 68 years old, was a native of Irvine, Ky., and was the author of several religious works.

ROCHESTER, Minn., May 29 (AP).—The kind of funeral he would have ordered was arranged today for Dr. Charles H. Mayo, 73 years old, famed surgeon.

The service is to be simple. After private ceremonies in his country estate at Maywood, a chosen 200 persons were listed to attend the service in Calvary Episcopal Church at 4:30 p. m. The Rev. Guy C. Menefee will officiate. There was to be no sermon and no elaborate ritual.

Dr. William H. Mayo, the brother who was so closely associated with "Dr. Charlie" that they had the same bank account, was ordered by physicians not to attend. The 77-year-old partner is recovering from an operation April 22 for a gastric ulcer.

From all walks of life, 9240 persons made their way into the lobby of the Mayo Clinic yesterday and, on almost the exact spot where he was born, paid homage to "Doctor Charlie."

Between 600 and 800 telegrams, from all nations of the world—from noted physicians and surgeons, leaders in public life, and patients—brought condolences to the widow and family.

Among persons who telegraphed they planned to attend the funeral were Dr. Fred Beasley, past president, and Dr. J. T. Ballou, all of Chicago, representing the American College of Surgeons.

"Wheelchair Johnny" McBride, 82 years old, whose life was saved 36 years ago by Dr. Mayo, stood silent for a few minutes before the bier.

He earned his sobriquet by 25 years of pushing invalids' wheel chairs, without charge, as a means of expressing his gratitude to "Dr. Charlie" for giving him back his life in 1903 through an orthopedic operation. He lives on income received from the sale of his farm.

Key to Industrial Peace

From the New York World-Telegram.

This country can really begin to move toward that industrial peace for which it is if Congress will follow the advice of Dr. William M. Leiserson.

Federal mediation system large and enough to serve all who work and all hire—that's Dr. Leiserson's prescription. This man, soon to become a member of National Labor Relations Board, speaks the authority of successful experience. Five years he has been a member of the Federal Mediation Board, which functions on the railways and air lines.

When the Wagner Act is corrected in its administration improved, it will still set of negative commands to employers not to interfere with employees' right to organize, not to refuse to bargain collectively, and that, as Dr. Leiserson says, there should be an affirmative command to employers and employees

DEBT REVISION BILL

Measure Aiding Two Major Lines Sent Back to House.

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—The Senate passed today legislation which would have the effect of permitting two major railroads to arrange adjustment and postponement of their debts.

As the measure originally passed the House it would have given similar opportunity to all railroads not now in bankruptcy, but the Senate set up qualifications which proponents said would limit it, in effect, to the Baltimore & Ohio and Lehigh Valley railroads. The bill returns to the House for consideration of the amendments.

These roads have taken the preliminary steps which would be required by legislation to have been completed by April 1 of this year.

Approval of 75 per cent of the grade's creditors and sanction of a Federal court will be required to put the adjustment plans in operation.

McKittrick Sues to Oust 142 Risk Firms

ers all premiums collected in excess of rates authorized by the 1922 act.

To find the companies guilty of violating the laws of Missouri and to forfeit their corporate charters ousting them from business, or to fine the companies in an amount deemed proper by the Supreme Court.

In charging that the companies illegally had collected the 16-2-3 per cent increase from 1930 to 1935, and the modified increase since November, 1935, McKittick took the position that under Missouri law no fire insurance rate increase could be put into effect until and unless approved by the State Insurance superintendent.

The companies filed the schedule of the 16-2-3 per cent increase in December, 1929, and forced it into effect under Federal District Court temporary injunctions effective June 1, 1930. Before legal service in the suit was obtained on Joseph B. Thompson, then Insurance Superintendent, Thompson denied the increase. This order of denial was appealed to the State courts by 74 companies not represented in the Federal Court litigation.

Denies Federal Jurisdiction.
McKittick contended that under the law requiring the Superintendent's approval before an increase could be granted, the Federal Court was without jurisdiction, and exceeded its authority "in attempting to permit" the insurance companies, through the injunctions, to collect "an insurance rate which had been denied by the Superintendent of Insurance."

Charges of bribery and conspiracy on the part of the companies named as defendants were returned through virtually all of the Attorney-General's allegations of law violation which were as follows:

That prior to May 18, 1935 (the date of the compromise agreement), the companies entered into a conspiracy to cheat the policyholders and the State of Missouri of $7,834,656 by bribing O'Malley to procure the compromise, and with the intent of having R. E. O'Malley, and others influence R. E. O'Malley.

That the companies separately and collectively, unlawfully paid, or agreed to pay, $750,000 to O'Malley, and others, in consideration of O'Malley approving the compromise. (Pendegast first agreed with Street on a $500,000 price for his approval of the compromise, but Street later increased the agreed amount to $750,000, in the effort to speed up the compromise. Only $440,000 was paid to the Boss up to Street's death early in 1938, and nothing was paid to him thereafter.)

That an order issued by O'Malley on May 21, 1935, granting the companies four-fifths of the 16-2-3 per cent increase, which order O'Malley attempted to make retroactive to June 1, 1930, when the litigation began, was illegal "because procured by conspiracy, bribery and fraud."

That by reason of "all the above and foregoing acts, criminal, fraudulent or otherwise," the companies had converted to their own use the property of policyholders, and that by reason of the facts charged the companies had misused and abused their charter franchises and privileges, and had usurped franchises and privileges not granted by their charters.

Court Takes Jurisdiction.
The Supreme Court assumed jurisdiction of the ouster proceeding after the filing of the petition. Under the usual procedure the next step will be to appoint a special commissioner to conduct hearings, and to make recommendations to the court.

The petition does not name as defendants the 74 other stock fire insurance companies involved in a State court suit over the 16-2-3 per cent increase, in which the Supreme Court held the companies had not legally collected the increase during the litigation, dismissed their petition for review of Thompson's order in 1930 denying the increase, and ordered the $1,786,000 impounded in the case refunded to the policyholders. The refund has been held up until the Legislature appropriates funds for the insurance department to pay expenses of returning the money to the policyholders.

McKittick Explains Purpose of Insurance Ouster Suit.
Attorney-General McKittick in explaining the purpose of the suit, said today:

"The quo warranto proceeding filed in the Supreme Court by me today has no connection whatever with any fire insurance rate litigation now pending in the three-judge Federal court at Kansas City, Mo."

"My purpose in instituting this action is to terminate the prolonged rate litigation and restore to the policyholders every cent that has been taken from them illegally by the 1935 compromise settlement, and also put in force the rate reduction ordered by Superintendent Hyde in 1922 and upheld by the courts.

To accomplish this purpose, the quo warranto petition seeks to oust the 142 insurance companies named as defendants, unless they meet the conditions set forth in the complaint, based on the laws of this State.

"Superintendent Hyde's order of 1922 reduced the fire insurance rates of Missouri 10 per cent. After the order was finally upheld by the courts in 1929, the companies soon thereafter put in force a rate increase of 16-2-3 per cent, which increase was disapproved by the then Superintendent of Insurance. This was the basis of the litigation which was later compromised by R. E. O'Malley."

The compromise settlement not only gave the companies 80 per cent of the excess premiums illegally collected under the 16-2-3 per cent increase, $10,000,000 of which was impounded in the Federal Court, but was the basis of an order by O'Malley giving the companies a new rate that was approximately 8 per cent above the rates ordered by Superintendent Hyde or approximately half of the 16-2-3 per cent increase.

"The further purpose of this quo warranto action is to recover for the policyholders not only the $8,000,000 impounded funds that had been paid to the insurance companies by reason of the fraudulent compromise, but also all of the premiums collected by the companies under the higher rate fixed by O'Malley. This excess has amounted to nearly $12,500,000 a year or a total of approximately $5,000,000 since the compromise was put in force in 1935.

"The quo warranto action seeks, therefore, to get back for the policyholders a total of approximately $13,000,000 which, in my opinion, has been unlawfully taken from them.

World Reinstates Lower Rate.
"It is also the purpose of this action to prohibit the collection of the rate fixed by O'Malley on the basis of the compromise and to reinstate the lower rates fixed by the Hyde order of 1922, which would save the policyholders of Missouri a total of about $1,250,000 a year.

"Also, this action affords the Supreme Court of our State the opportunity of finding the companies in such sum as it may deem fair and proper as a penalty for violating the laws of Missouri."

BAR SPOKESMAN FOR ELIMINATION OF DOUBLE TAXES

G. M. Morris Tells House Committee Stockholders
in Mergers Have to Pay Levies Twice.

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—George M. Morris of the American Bar Association asked the House Ways and Means Committee today to eliminate what he termed double taxation on the profits of business reorganizations.

Morris, chairman of the association's finance committee, testified that as a result of a recent Supreme Court decision the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may levy on a tax on the profits accruing both to the absorbed company and to that company's stockholders in a merger.

Morris was the first non-official witness to testify before the committee on tax revision. It opened the hearing Saturday and heard Secretary Morgenthau indicate that the administration, among other things, was willing that tax "irritants" be removed.

Speculating on whether levies on both the company and the stockholders would not diminish the number of reorganizations, and therefore, decrease the total Government tax return from mergers, he said:

"The more onerous it is to get a marriage license, the fewer legal marriages you have."

Mitchell B. Carroll of New York, counsel for the National Foreign Trade Council, Inc., asked the committee to remove what he called "indirect restrictions" on corporations operating in foreign trade.

One such restriction, he asserted, resulted from the undistributed profits tax and prevented domestic concerns from obtaining full credits for the taxes they must pay foreign governments.

PHYSICIAN FATALLY SHOT
IN DRUG STORE OF FRIEND

Owner Held in Jail at Ozark, Mo.,
Said to Have Told Conflicting Stories.

SPARTA, Mo., May 29 (AP).—Dr. Hugh Wise, 48 years old, was shot and killed yesterday in a drug store operated by Bert Henderson, 50. Henderson was held in the Christian County jail at Ozark for questioning.

Coroner Maples said the druggist first admitted he fired the shot, but later declared the physician shot himself.

Dr. Wise and Henderson were regarded as close friends.

SOVIET ISSUES
ORDER TO RESTRICT
SIZE OF GARDENS

Government Says Collective Farmers Neglect General Interest to Work Own Plots.

MOSCOW, May 29 (AP).—A decree aimed at "counterfeit collective farmers" was issued yesterday by Joseph Stalin and Premier Molotov. The purpose is to restrict the size of private garden plots.

Unscrupulous collective farm members, the decree said, have been resorting to trickery in order to increase the size of their individual plots, and some have devoted their entire time to cultivation of their own ground to the neglect of collective interests.

The result, it charged, has been an artificial labor shortage. Some workers were accused of having been able to take so much additional land they have begun selling or leasing it.

The new decree made such a practice a crime and provided for punishment of collective farm chairmen and other responsible officials.

It ordered measurement of all household garden plots and demanded that wherever they exceed the legal limit—varying from about half an acre in fertile areas to two and one-half acres in arid sections—the surplus land shall be added to the collective fields.

Henceforth, collective farmers may work for themselves only after working for the community.

If this should lead to a surplus of workers, each collective farm must consider migration of its extra men to other areas.

She Takes Trouble to Excise Commissioner After Argument Over Paying Sales Tax Bill.

Miss Stella Glebe, a waitress, went to Excise Commissioner Lawrence McDaniel's office today to tell him her troubles. It seemed that she had argued with her employer, George Blockburger, owner of the Rex Bar at 1114 North Sixth street, that he had failed to pay part of their stock in order to pay the State sales tax bill. This morning she found the door locks had been changed.

McDaniel listened with interest and learned that although the liquor license was in her name, Blockburger still was the actual owner of the place. His liquor license had been revoked a year ago. After that happened, she told McDaniel, Blockburger promised her an extra $2 a week if she would apply for a liquor license in her own name. She got the license but the extra pay wasn't forthcoming. She even had to advance money to pay the light bill and thought she was getting into trouble.

With that information, McDaniel ordered a hearing Wednesday on the charge that the license was obtained last July by fraud and misrepresentation and should be revoked.

Nine other tavern proprietors were cited to appear June 8 and 13 for hearings to determine whether their licenses should be revoked or suspended. One was charged with permitting a minor in the tavern, the others with selling on Sundays.

Pastors Charge Head of Church Council Betrayed
Critics of Government

BERLIN, May 29 (AP).—Members of the Protestant Confessional Synod have been urged to disregard Dr. Friedrich Werner, president of the Evangelical Church Council.

A resolution adopted by the Executive Committee of the synod and declared from pulpits yesterday demanded that Dr. Werner be "identified himself with the German Christians, in the face of warnings."

The resolution charged he had put himself beyond the pale of orthodox Christianity, therefore, and no longer had a right to authority over the great body of the Protestant Church.

Members of the synod were urged by the resolution also to continue contributing to the support of pastors who have been "disciplined" and to stand together for the preservation of Christianity.

The message from the pulpits on Whitsunday coincided with disclosure that Germany had barred radio broadcasts of religious services and that the Government also was putting a curb on the sale of Bibles and church tracts. The radio sermons, investigation showed, disappeared unannounced, possibly months ago.

Dr. Werner was assailed for out-and-out robbery. In cutting off state stipends of ministers who do not wholeheartedly embrace Nazism.

The German Christians, the resolution charged, arbitrarily interpret the Scriptures to fit their ideology, take certain passages and eliminate them from the Bible and attempt to force all believers into one national church.

German Protestantism long has been split by those who favor Nazi control of church affairs and those who oppose it. Two sweeping orders by Dr. Werner March 29 opened the way for the elimination of recalcitrants and their replacement by churchmen who would conform to Nazi concepts.

TWO TENNIS TEAMS REACH SEMIFINALS IN JOHNSON TOURNEY

Two teams, composed of Karl Hodge and Joe Werner and Ray and Harold Weise are in the semifinals of the Andrew W. Johnson invitational doubles tournament. The top-seeded team of Frank Keaney and Howard Stephens played Jack and William Bascom with the match stopped by rain after each team had won a set. They will play out the match today. Hodge and Werner defeated Gus Boehmer and Bert Lambert, 6-2 and 6-0 while the Weise brothers won over Ed Serrano and Teddy Eggmann, 6-2, 9-7.

MAX SAYS HE'LL KAYO OPPONENT IN SIX ROUNDS

Young Californian Finishes Training and Expects to Weigh in at 203—Has Boxed 90 Rounds in Last Month.

NYACK, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—Lou Nova finished training for Max Baer yesterday with all hands hereabouts predicting he'll outpoint Madcap Maxie in their 15-round brawl in the Yankee Stadium, New York, Thursday night.

The young Californian heavy impressed the biggest gallery he has drawn since opening camp more than a month ago in a five-round fight with Jorge Brescia, the Argentine, Harry Weber of Ethonia, and Jimmy Smith of New York.

The last round with Smith was cut short when the New Yorker unintentionally stuck a thumb in one of Nova's eyes. A hasty examination revealed no damage was done and Lou's appearance in the Yankee ball park Thursday night in no way is jeopardized.

While the Nova rosters left camp reaching for their bank rolls, Harry Wills, the old Negro heavyweight, who was quite a fighter in his own right a few years back, went around sounding the lone discordant note.

"This fellow won't beat Baer in a hundred years," Wills told all who would listen. "Baer knows too much for one thing and for another thing, Nova lets himself get irritated too quickly. If Nova fires punches Thursday night like he did today, he'll be landing on Baer's chest and shoulders instead of on his jaw."

In the last four and a half weeks, Nova has boxed 90 rounds. He weighed 208 pounds on the workout and expects to weigh in at 210 before the New York State Athletic Commission. He will remain in camp until time to motor to New York for the weighing-in ceremonies.

Baer Predicts Knockout.
FERDALE, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—The limb wasn't at all crowded, so Maxie Baer climbed out on it yesterday with the prediction he would knock out Lou Nova in six rounds or fewer at the Yankee Stadium Thursday night.

Although Maxie's condition is as near perfect as it will ever be, the fact that he's now 30—an old man in this cauliflower business—stands against him in his last stand against the Michigan 1936-37 hockey team and played one season with the Chicago Blackhawks of the National League after graduation.

HULL SAYS ISOLATION MEANS REGIMENTATION

'Thought That Such a Policy Would Make It Easier for Us a Disastrous Illusion.'

CHICAGO, May 29 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said last night "there is no more disastrous illusion than the thought that a policy of national isolation would make it easier for us to solve our great domestic problems."

"The exact reverse is true," he asserted in an address before the Chicago Sunday Evening Club.

Speaking of the possibility of another major world conflict, he said: "Only two decades have passed since guns were stilled in the greatest armed conflict in history. . . . It is appalling to contemplate how quickly and how widely the lessons of so recent a past seem to have been forgotten; how soon again the voices of national leaders are raised in several parts of the world in glorification of war and in depreciation of the blessings of enduring peace."

Responsibility on Leaders.

"War is today an incomparably greater menace to progress than it ever has been in the past. Responsibility without parallel rests therefore upon those national leaders . . . who . . . compel nations which are threatened by their actions to face the tragic choice of surrender or armed defense."

"Even if the supreme disaster of war should be avoided, the gigantic waste of human energies and material resources involved in the widespread construction of armaments on the present scale must inevitably exact a fearful toll in the general economic and social deterioration throughout the world. The result can only be to put many nations on drastically reduced rations of civilized existence for a long time to come."

He declared that carrying national isolation to its ultimate conclusion would necessitate a readjustment "of such magnitude that it could not possibly be accomplished without far-reaching intervention on the part of government with dangerous social effects."

"Regimentation in practically every phase of national life would be the inevitable consequence. One needs only to look at the experience of the few countries which have attempted to reorganize themselves on a basis of even partial self-sufficiency to realize what the . . . results of such regimentation would probably be. . . ."

"Far from facilitating the solution of our domestic problems, a policy of national isolation, or even a movement toward such a policy, would aggravate the very difficulties with which we are now confronted."

U. S. CONVICT WHO ESCAPED FROM TRAIN RECAPTURED

John B. Miles Arrested at Terre Haute, Ind.; Eluded Guards at Mexico, Mo.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., May 29.—John B. Miles, Federal convict who escaped from a train at Mexico, Mo. when on the way to St. Louis last March, taking with him one guard's pants, another's shirt, $15, a deputy marshal's badge and the keys to the handcuffs he wore, was arrested in an apartment here today by FBI agents and police. With him were a young woman and her three-year-old son.

Miles was being taken from Leavenworth Penitentiary to St. Louis at his own request to plead guilty to a counterfeiting charge when he escaped. He had been serving a term for Dyer Act violation. When he walked off the train during a brief stop at Mexico, he left his own clothes with his three guards.

EAST ST. LOUIS POLICE SAY WATCHMAN KILLING IS SOLVED

Youth Caught Stealing Gasoline Implicates Companion as One Who Fired Fatal Shots Nov. 21. East St. Louis police announced today they had solved the murder of Herbert Perry, Southern Railway Watchman who was shot and killed early in the morning of last Nov. 21 as he was leaving work at the roundhouse at Forty-second street and Converse avenue, Fireworks Station.

A confession that he was present when Perry was shot was obtained from Warren Shaw, 17-year-old Negro, who lives in Golden Garden, Negro suburb. He was arrested Saturday night by Deputy Sheriffs Frank Baur and Francis Touchette, who found him siphoning gasoline from an automobile near the roundhouse. He named another 17-year-old Negro now under arrest as the person who fired two shots at the watchman and said a third Negro youth who is being sought was the owner of the automatic pistol which was used. Shaw said his companion fired when the watchman called to them as they were stealing coal. Perry, 29 years old, lived at 4438 Converse avenue.

SPECIAL HIGHWAY PRECAUTION

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 29 (AP).—Twenty-four hour intensive patrol of the State's highways began Saturday with State Troopers under orders to "bear down on the holiday reckless driver" from Col. B. Marvin Casteel, superintendent of the State Highway Patrol.

The intensive duty will continue through Tuesday—Decoration day—in an "effort to save lives," Col. Casteel said. Particular attention will be paid to known danger spots on the State highways.

LABOR BOARD CHANGE IN RULES IS INDICATED

Madden Says Employers in Certain Cases May Be Allowed to Seek Election.

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP).—Chairman J. Warren Madden indicated today the National Labor Relations Board soon would amend its regulations to permit an employer, in certain cases, to petition the board for a collective bargaining election among its workers.

In answer to questions by Representative Thomas of Texas, Madden told the House Labor Committee: "I haven't the slightest doubt but that the board will make a change in that direction, but as long as hearings are going on we think we should get the benefit of testimony of witnesses and the advice of your Congressmen as to what you think would be desirable."

The Wagner Labor Act permits petitions for such elections to be filed only by the workers or unions representing them.

"Why don't you do that job next week and get it over with, since you say you have the authority?" Thomas asked.

"That question looms larger in the public opinion and in editorial writings than it does in any practical importance," Madden said. "I think perhaps there is no valid reason why they (the employers) shouldn't have it."

Mrs. Mary Norton (Dem.), New Jersey, chairman of the committee, said a large industrial employer, whom she did not identify,

LABOR NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE TO RESUME ACTIVITY HERE

Adopts New Constitution and Draws Up Plan to Organize Wards and Townships.

Adopted New Constitution and Draws Up Plan to Organize Wards and Townships. Labor's Non-Partisan League of Greater St. Louis, inactive since its effort to prevent the re-election of Congressman C. Arthur Anderson, adopted a new constitution yesterday and formulated a plan for the development of active organizations in all city wards and county townships.

Fifty delegates, representing about 35,000 trade unionists mostly affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations, attended the meeting held in Amalgamated Hall, 1722 Washington avenue.

The Pendergast machine was denounced in two of the resolutions adopted by the league. One of these declared that insurance and utilities monopolies in the State had been silent partners of the Kansas City organization, and pledged the League's support to President Roosevelt and Governor Stark in making "a New Deal State" of Missouri. Another blamed a Pendergast-controlled Legislative Committee for the failure to appropriate a sum adequate for the relief situation of St. Louis.

Max Michaelson of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers was elected chairman of the league; Eva Wagner, joint council of CIO Auxiliaries, recording secretary, and Walter Shannon, organizer for the CIO's United Shoe Workers, secretary-treasurer.

Postoffice Clerk 23 Years Retires. Kurt Matthias, a clerk in the St. Louis postoffice for the last 23 years, was retired at ceremonies held Saturday at the main postoffice. Matthias, who lives at 1721 North Twenty-third street, received a wallet from his fellow employees.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 29 (AP).—James Lee Key, who as Mayor of Atlanta in 1931 said in Paris, France, that "prohibition is abominable," died of pneumonia at St. Joseph's Hospital here yesterday. He was 71 years old. Key was one of the first public officials in the South to advocate repeal of the national prohibition law. He served as Mayor for 10 years.

JUDGE KIRKWOOD IS ENJOINED IN HUGH CAMPBELL WILL SUIT

State Supreme Court Issues Writ on Plea of Heir-at-Law of Hazlett Campbell.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 29.—The State Supreme Court issued today a stop order, enjoining Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood of St. Louis from proceeding with the long-pending suit contesting the will of Hugh Campbell, wealthy St. Louisian, who died in August, 1931.

The application for the writ was filed today in behalf of John McNickle, a minor, by Paul S. Limerick as curator. The application states John McNickle is an heir-at-law of Hazlett Campbell, brother of Hugh.

It was charged that Judge Kirkwood erroneously denied the heir-at-law leave to revive the will contest litigation. Hugh Campbell left his $1,000,000 estate in trust for his brother, and upon the death of Hazlett the estate was to go to Yale University.

50 KANSAS CITY VOLUNTEERS PAY STATE BACK INCOME TAX. Many Didn't Know They Owed Money Until They Read of Pendergast's Flight.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 29 (AP).—State Auditor Forrest Smith said today since the tax evasion indictments of T. J. Pendergast and R. E. O'Malley more than 50 Kansas Citizens have appeared at his office to pay up back income levies. Most of the cases involved small salaried persons, he said, and the majority of them didn't know they owed a tax until they began checking up because of the Pendergast and O'Malley publicity.

One Kansas Citizen settled up taxes back to 1917. It cost him about $2500.

U. S. PROTESTS TO JAPAN AGAINST TWO BOMBINGS

American Property Damaged at Swatow and Loohokow; Maps Had Been Furnished.

PEIPING, May 29 (AP).—The United States embassy today made representations to Japanese authorities here concerning two recent cases of bombing of American property in China.

The first incident was on May 5, when Japanese planes demolished a small building at Swatow belonging to the Marshall Field Co. of Chicago. The second was the bombing on the following day of installations of the Standard Oil Co. of New York at Loohokow in Hupeh Province.

The embassy stated that Japanese authorities had been furnished with maps showing the location of both properties.

TWO BROTHERS GO THROUGH DANGEROUS RIVER CANYON

They Swim and Wade in Gorge of Rio Grande, Making Trip in 13 Hours.

SANDERSON, Tex., May 29 (AP).—Two brothers emerged from the Big Bend country yesterday—conquerors of the treacherous Santa Helena canyon of the Rio Grande. Roy L. Swift, 27 years old, of Robstown, Tex., and W. E. Swift, 37, Brownwood, Tex., completed the 21-mile trip Saturday night.

It took them 13 hours to swim and wade through the canyon, in which a soldier was killed and two companions were marooned on a rock ledge for five days last year. Wearing swimming suits and carrying inner tubes, they waded and walked the first 10 miles.

"From there on the walls rise 1000 to 2000 feet," said Roy Swift. "Two miles farther down the river we encountered the dangerous rapids where several lives have been lost. There were places along this quarter-mile stretch where no swimmer could live, and we used ropes to get over the boulders."

Case Records of a PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Of Northwestern University

CASE M-125: Philip R., aged 32, is principal of a large grammar school.

"Do you think it is worth while to spend the time and money on an education in order to become a school teacher?" he asked me. "My own experience is quite similar to many, so let me cite a few personal items from my past record. Nine years ago I began teaching in a small country school. My yearly salary amounted to $655 per year, or less than $55 per month. After moving around from one school to another, I finally got a break last spring, and was selected to be the principal of a large grade school. Being a married man, I was offered $5 per month more than the former principal. But even with this extra sum, my annual salary is now but $945, or only $78.75 per month.

"Out of this meager sum I must pay my own expenses when I attend a teachers' institute or a summer session at the university, and our board insists that we teachers enroll each year in one of these. If we ask our board to underwrite our expenses, they tell us that attendance at summer session is all to our advantage; that it means nothing to the school.

"BUT WE'D BE discharged if we ever refused to attend. Moreover, we are expected to donate liberally to our local church and other altruistic bodies, whether or not we belong to such churches. If we happen to be broke, we must borrow in order to make our donation. I know this sounds exaggerated, Dr. Crane, but it is absolutely the truth. In fact, we must even purchase our clothing, food and other necessities in our own small town where members of the board are merchants, although they hold us up on prices, and we could get much better bargains from the mail order houses.

"This kind of life is very disheartening to all of us. Why should we spend money year after year for advancement, when we don't even rate a janitor's salary? All of my teachers and I greatly enjoy our work of teaching youngsters, but we are growing bitter and disillusioned. My college classmates are now well established in their respective professions, while I, as a married man and school principal, rate a paltry $78.75 per month. Are we in the wrong field of work?

PRESIDENT HUTCHINS of the University of Chicago has indicted America for permitting such disgraceful salary conditions to prevail. The school teachers are molding the thinking and cultural attitudes of the future generation. Certainly their efforts are worthy of a more equitable salary scale. Every week I receive comments from educators, such as this grammar school principal, who are trying valiantly to hold up the standards of modern education, but are being paid very inferior wages for so doing.

The best and most influential teaching in our school system occurs below the college level. In grammar school we have the greatest opportunity to eradicate prejudices, instill idealism, and protect the democratic principles on which our nation was founded.

The grammar schools and our churches are really our first line trenches in promoting good citizenship and the continuation of American ideals. The army and navy get billions with great ease, while the important defenders of our country; namely, the school teachers, are ignored or abused.

Command the Situation

By Elsie Robinson

WANT to get things done? Want to put your life across? Then command the situation!

That doesn't mean that you should act like a combination of Napoleon, Mussolini and Alexander the Great. It does mean that you should know what you intend to do before you try to do it.

ELSIE ROBINSON.

Don't just wobble along taking things as they come. Get ready for things before they come. Decide first what you want to do with yourself—what goal you're driving for.

Don't leave it up to God or Fate or your family. Make your own plans. And keep making plans—plan for each hour, each day, each week.

Say to yourself—"I am going to accomplish certain things this day." Then accomplish them.

This can't be done by merely wanting to do it. It can't be done by merely "making up your mind." You must sink your spiritual fangs into the job. You must fasten yourself so firmly to the situation that nothing can shake you off. You must transform yourself into a veritable bulldog.

"But suppose in spite of all that things interfere with one's plans?" you say. Things won't interfere half as much as you anticipate if you have a command of the situation.

THINGS INTERFERE with our plans because we let them. If you have decided to get to a place at 4:57 you can get to that place at 4:57, barring acts of Providence. People may call you on the phone, friends may drop in—but you can put such interruptions courteously but firmly to one side if you have taken command of the situation.

Life opens amazingly to the man who commands the situation. He may not be very talented or powerful, but if he really knows what he's about and never allows himself to be sidetracked he can accomplish almost everything he sets his mind upon.

Organize your mind. Organize even the slightest, most prosaic details of your day's work. Know what you're going to do and how and when you're going to do it.

Stop thinking like a grasshopper—skipping from side to side, swayed by every impulse. Begin to think like a man! Command your situation.

COOK-COOS By Ted Cook

OBSERVERS contend that Germany has a secret Department of Misinformation which fed Russia false reports of treason and intrigue on the part of her army leaders, with the result that Stalin decapitated his own military organization.

Flushed by this success, the Department of Misinformation is likely to have everybody all mixed up before very long. We'll likely be reading dispatches like this:

BERLIN—Before demanding return of other lost colonies, Germany will insist that Japan relinquish former Pacific Islands now under Japanese mandate.

BERLIN—Doc Goebbels is planning a good-will trip to the United States, where he will arrange for a billboard and sky-writing campaign to promote world peace.

MUNICH—Field Marshal Goering denied reports that his loss of weight was brought about by tennis playing and severe massage treatments. "I just wasted away," he said, "because of the sausage shortage and the fact that the hens in Germany can't lay because of the continuous noise of rifle practice."

SAFETY SONGS FOR ADULTS. (With apologies to Irving Caesar.) A boy stood at the race-horse tracks.

His savings in his mitt. The wise can bewail The rest of the tale— There isn't much of it.

So: Stay away from the race-horse tracks; They're naught but Satan's cloak. Them nags can go Incredibly slow, And horse-players all die broke.

And an allround man is a fellow who can keep a roof over his wife's head and at the same time keep her from raising it.

And hard to find Is comfort colder Than weeping on A shrugging shoulder.

A Clergyman's Problem About Own Wedding

General Invitation to Congregation Can Replace Sending Individual Cards.

By Emily Post

Dear Mrs. Post: I AM a clergyman and my fiancée is very active in the work of another church. She will, of course, become a member of my church after we are married. Meanwhile the invitations to our wedding are of chief concern to both of us. I feel that my entire congregation should be invited to my wedding in her church, and she in turn feels that all the members of her church should be invited, too. The list of names to receive engraved invitations adds up to a figure that is almost prohibitive because of the expense. Will you tell us if people could be invited in a more general way.

Answer: Under circumstances such as you prescribe, it would be entirely proper to issue the invitations yourself in your own church, to all members of your congregation, and to have the same invitation given by your fiancée's church by her clergyman. If there is one, it would be possible to print this invitation in the church calendar instead of giving it verbally from the pulpit. Engraved invitations of any kind will not, even be necessary if, in addition to these general invitations, your fiancée also invites very intimate friends and nearest relatives verbally to a small reception or breakfast, or whatever you are having after the ceremony. If you limit this reception list to the most intimate circle no others can possibly feel hurt because not invited.

Dear Mrs. Post: We understand that the parents of the man are supposed to pay a visit on their son's new fiancée and her family. But if the man's family makes no move, is there anything we can do? We would like to meet them before the wedding. I really feel that they do not know it is up to them to make the first overtures and that they may be waiting for us.

Answer: The man's family is supposed to call on his fiancée and her family and invite the fiancée to tea, or dinner, or even to a party they are giving in her honor. Whether they invite her family for any definite time is a question of personal situation rather than rule. As to the second part of your question, it is very possible, since few people know this particular detail of etiquette. It would be entirely proper that the girl's mother write to the man's mother and ask her to come in to tea and say that she would like to meet her and to talk over the wedding list with her.

In other words, it would be better for the girl's mother to invite the man's mother to her house than to go to see her. But again, no one should criticize the girl's mother should she go to see the other mother first, since as I have already said, comparatively few people know this convention.

Evolution of a Queen's Wardrobe

CROSS the Scottish moors there used to walk a sturdy pink-cheek girl with wind-blown hair, wearing a comfortable sweater and tweed skirt.

Today, as England's Queen, she lives in the limelight of a throne and the clothes she wears feed the presses of a fashion-conscious world. Between those two cycles of her life lie 20 years and a long and difficult sartorial battle.

For Elizabeth, Queen of England, was not born a fashion plate. She is not a fashion plate now in the sense of devotedly following fashion's whims. But her clothes reflect distinction, are watched for fashion tips by every style-conscious person in the world.

As England's Duchess of York, she became known for her graciousness, her kindness and her smile. She made no claim to fame in her clothes. Indeed fashion experts called them stodgy and dull. She appeared repeatedly in beige wool ensembles, combining a dress and coat (she dislikes tailcoats) and showing relatively little change of color. Most of them were furred at the neckline in a fluffy circle of beige fur. Many of her hat brims rolled suddenly back from her face.

Then came a day when the Duke of York mounted England's throne and the woman who used to walk over the Scottish moors, stepped into the limelight as Queen. Her clothes became matters of first importance.

As Queen she faced difficult fashion problems. The simple little black frocks which other women wore with such distinction were not for her. Trained in the tradition of Queen Mary, she had to choose clothes light and distinctive enough in color to make them stand out from the crowd.

Her evening clothes presented another problem, since they had to be of light color and fabric to elude clips supplemented her neck-decorations and orders she must wear.

Moreover, she faced figure problems, as every woman does. Hers was shortness of stature. The fashion demands of her position had to be grafted on the demands of her silhouette.

WORKING with one of London's leading dressmakers she took up the difficult problem and so began the development and evolution of the wardrobe of a Queen. Soft powder blues, lilacs, grays and dusty rose supplemented the beige she had worn so much before. Flounces and draped effects gave way to simple smart cuts.

Fluffy fox collars were pruned away to reveal that short graceful curve of her throat, and the fur was placed on other parts of her costume to retain the richness they demand.

Sharply rolled hat brims gave way to those which swept back and new chic and grace, and jeweled clips supplemented her neck-decorations and orders she must wear. Gradually a new "Elizabethan mode" evolved, but not one costume sacrificed the personality of a woman who was feminine to the crown of her head.

Then came the royal visit to Paris in July, 1938, when the Queen captured even the fashion fancy of the French. Those spreading crinoline gowns she wore are credited with having launched this winter's mode of full skirted evening frocks and the frothy whiteness of her costumes with having inspired much of the vogue for the lingerie trims this spring.

Today on her first American tour her clothes are winning fashion applause. A slimmed figure has given an appearance of height; smart hats have added to her chic. Her preference for pastel shades has had its effect on fashions in Canada, where many women have chosen gowns of dove gray, powder blue and lilac for state functions at which she appeared.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

By Wynn

For Tuesday, May 30. SEE the other side of every question and problem today, especially if you are a woman or if a woman is involved in the picture. Afternoon and evening hours strain mutual relations if we are careless, so take it easy, save wear and tear.

The Hard Way. Today is a day that should remind us that the easiest thing to do is to die for an ideal—it is much more difficult to live for it. It takes only a moment to die; but living for the benefit of mankind requires constant sacrifice, holding one's performance up to a high standard day after day, denying the calls of selfishness, keeping the vision clear, facing the bright light that lies ahead.

Your Year Ahead. Your year ahead till next birthday brings expansion through the right kind of allies, partners, and friends; possibly through law also. New inner and behind-the-scenes activities. Danger: Nov. 25-Dec. 6; and April 1-19, 1940.

For Wednesday, May 31. IMPROVEMENT over vibrations of last few days here, but don't try to go too far too fast, particularly in the afternoon and evening, when the judgment is likely to be a little sketchy; wait till you have all facts before deciding.

Great Changes. As we look backward in history we see the outstanding periods during which big new ideas come into the minds of men, ideas that revolutionized the thinking and the working conditions of the world. There was the era of discovery of waste places; there was the discovery of engines to run machinery. Now we are at a different type of change—but it will be as revolutionary as any known.

Your Year Ahead. Your year ahead, if this is your birthday, sees some inner compulsion to overthrow restrictions, desire changes; slow and sure only strong year for finding opportunities through others. Danger: Nov. 26-Dec. 8; and April 2-21, 1940.

Tendency to go to extremes which will help no one; keep your balance. ## Vacation Time Has a Definite Medical Aspect

'Sedative' Climate Best for Those Who Have a Constitutional Weakness.

By

Logan Clendenen, M. D.

THE time has come to think about vacationing—at least to plan on it. And it has a definite medical aspect.

Americans are almost as regular migrants as the birds. Thirty-five million persons, with great regularity, move back and forth across this continent. In jalopies, and trains, and motor cars, and airplanes, driven by whim, fancy or restlessness, this ever-growing flock is on the wing. They spend the "incredible but carefully estimated sum of $5,000,000,000 a year."

The reasons that impel them are not very cogent. Health—either mental or physical; relaxation and renewal of vital forces—would probably be the reason given by most. But medical supervision is seldom intelligently applied to them; indeed, very few physicians would be able to give intelligent advice on the subject, if asked.

The inhabitants of all 48 states take part in these migrations, but those of the Midwestern and Northeastern states predominate. This, of course, is largely a matter of climate. The Midwest is too hot for comfort in the summer, the New England states too cold in winter.

The climates sought are seashores, lakeshores, altitudes and deserts. So New England, New York, New Jersey, California, the Great Lakes States and New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado are the popular vacation states.

Dr. Charles E. Singer of Long Beach, N. Y., in the Journal of the American Medical Association, has made a useful classification of climates into the "stimulating" and the "sedative."

The sedative climate is characterized by stability of weather—on the whole, on the basis of temperature, the sedative climate is warm, the stimulating climate cool.

The stimulating climate is characterized by wide fluctuations in temperature from day to day, by sudden storms, days of rain alternating with days of sunshine. On the whole, on the basis of temperature, the sedative climate is warm, the stimulating climate cool.

The typical sedative climate is California the year round. The typical stimulating climate is Vermont. But no rule can determine exactly what a stimulating or sedative climate for any one person is. For the New York family the late fall climate of North Carolina will be sedative; for the Florida family it will be stimulating. The New York family finds the summer Maine climate stimulating; the native, after a Maine winter, finds it sedative.

The sedative climate is an excellent medical remedy for those with a constitutional weakness, i. e., for the feeble aged, for the delicate child, for those with debilitating diseases, such as heart disease or chronic kidney or arthritic ailments.

The stimulating climate is better for most of us who are confined during so much of the year, and need not only a mental change, but the dash of salt water on our skin and the wind in our faces. "Sleeping under blankets every night" is a postcard message that gives great and proper satisfaction. It is part of the cure.

IF YOU ASK My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WHEN a girl is going to be married is it proper for her future mother-in-law to go with them to pick out their furniture? We want this argument settled. Do you think it right for a married daughter to stay away from her mother three months when she lives only a short distance away from home?
L. G.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an address and stamped envelope for personal reply.

As far as I know, there are no special rules of conduct or decorum to give you in answer to the first question. You would like to gratify your own taste, no doubt; but are you sure that an opinion of an older person, grounded upon experience, might not be a great advantage, especially if you must be careful about expenditures and durability of the articles you buy? As to your second question, it is, indeed, unusual for a daughter to fall to visit her mother for so long a period, especially when their homes are so near to each other.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WILL YOU KINDLY answer in your column what the correct dress would be for young men, high school graduates, to wear at an evening dance the latter part of this month at a country club, to which the invitation reads, "semi-formal"? Thank you very much. PUZZLED.

The white coats with dark trousers seem to be the favorites so far. Later, when a very hot day comes, you will see the linen, gabardine or cloth suits in white.

Dear Martha Carr:
I AM GRADUATING at the end of the month from high school in this little city and sending out invitations. I have been dating a boy for the last three months or more and we have been friends for several years before that. My cousin thinks I should send him an invitation. I am doubtful, though I should not want to hurt his feelings. Please answer in your column, as I read this every day.

And should I invite him to the reception being held at my house after commencement exercises?
PERPLEXED.

The circumstances and degree of your friendship would decide the matter. Why not invite him to one or both, since you regard him as a good friend, or you would not receive him at your home or go out with him. These invitations are for friends, are they not?

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WOULD YOU KINDLY publish this in your column soon? I have advertised, but I feel a letter in your column would be more effective and more generally read: Will the boys who led away my little girl's large black and white fox terrier, "Mickey," from our home, 5831 De Giverville, on Saturday, May 13, please bring Mickey back. The child is heart-broken and cries all the time for her pet. My telephone is CAbany 4981M.
THANK YOU.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
I AM A YOUNG girl, 21 years of age, and have been married to a Jewish man; I am Gentile. This took place two years ago. I still love him and he still loves me. He is out of town and writes to me all the time and tells me that he never will forget me. Other fellows do not interest me and I cannot forget him. I have known him five years. I can get a job about 25 miles from him. What shall I do?
MISERABLE.

If there is no other "barrier" than the one you mention (which is no barrier at all, as persons of different religions are marrying all the time), you are fully justified in going to your husband.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
DO YOU KNOW of a place which rents horses and wagons for hay rides? We are anxious to have a hay ride and prefer the horse and wagon to a motor truck.
GROUP OF GIRLS.

Inquire at the riding stables, or, if you decide just what part of the country you intend to go through on your hay rides, inquire of the farmers thereabouts.

Dear Mrs. Carr:
WHAT WILL REMOVE white marks on varnished surfaces caused by water? Hope to see the answer in your column soon.
HOUSEWIFE.

To remove white spots, rub with soft cloth, applying spirits of camphor, and polish with oil. It might be safest to inquire of some well-established and well-known furniture dealer or cabinet-maker.

The Green-Eyed Monster

By Lydia Gray Shaw

This is the second of six articles in which psychologists and educators discuss problems that often trouble the average married couple, and tell how they may be met.

IF EVER the Green-Eyed Monster sneaks up on you, you'd better get off in a corner and start analyzing. Because if you're jealous, it's probably your own fault. Jealousy is a character weakness, says Dr. Olga Knopf, New York psychiatrist who is authority for these statements, and it can be cured, just as selfishness can be if the individual tries. But most people won't make the effort, she thinks.

The jealous individual may think jealousy indicates great and undying love. Love doesn't have a thing to do with it, says our authority. The best way to start fighting the dragon is to understand what the dragon is. Dr. Knopf says there are two kinds of jealousy—specific and general.

If you flare up only when you see Mrs. Jones, who you imagine is an object of your husband's attention, you suffer from specific jealousy. General jealousy is different. A variety of people or circumstances may make you jealous. That kind of jealousy, says the doctor, is nothing but possessiveness.

If you're jealous because your husband goes out to play poker; or because he pays attention to every one but you at parties; or because he doesn't tell you what's on his mind, the real reason for your unhappiness is that you want him to share his whole nature with you. Heaven forbid, says Dr. Knopf, "It would be a calamity if you should know another person's ev-

Mrs. E. M. Flaherty, Woman Trainer
At Fairmount Park Race Track, Hopes
Some Day to Own Kentucky Derby

By Dent McSkimming

MRS. FLAHERTY BANDAGES A HORSE'S LEG—IT'S ALL IN THE DAY'S WORK.

AFTER chatting a few minutes with gentle, little Mrs. E. M. Flaherty, woman trainer at Fairmount Park, you are inclined to believe no work in the world could be more wholesome and satisfying than the training of a thoroughbred you have raised from the day of its birth.

"Why should you think it strange to find a woman so happy with horses that she is willing to live with them?" asked this New York City-bred conditioner of racers. "My husband had horses and I spent a lot of time around the stables when he was racing. But I learned to love and understand horses long before that and I have been training them since 1927. It seems so natural to me that I'm afraid I wouldn't be happy doing anything else."

But, you think, there must be a catch somewhere. Surely this frail looking little woman can't do the real trainer's work. You know there is a lot of drudgery and that there is mud and dust and heat and win for me. And he did win, and smells and a lot of things the average female wants to run away from.

"Oh, but I do," she protests. "You think perhaps I can't handle a horse, that I can't clean out a stable, can't get out into the field and gather clover and alfalfa and milkweed to make sure that my three horses relish their meals?" "But that's just what I do. For three weeks before the meeting opened here I was here in the barn every day without help. There wasn't a qualified man around that could hire. It wasn't until the day the meeting opened that I got someone to give me a lift. I did it all. I'm up at 4:30 and in the stalls at 5."

A vital phase of training is the morning workout on the track. Mrs. Flaherty, at the while she talked of her work, held a split-second stop watch in the palm of her hand. It was no dainty wrist watch, but a businesslike looking watch, but a businesslike looking

I shipped him to Kentucky from our home at Fairmount, near Chicago, boarded him at a stock farm, wintered myself and spent the winter making him a sound horse. We returned to Chicago in the spring stall. There's no mirror on the wall, no ruffled curtain at the door. Heights, on a sloppy racetrack, he won and paid $168 to win, $63 to her. POLO STAR was claimed from her later for $1700, so she profited handsomely on the deal. What would have happened to gentle Mrs. Flaherty if she had not become attached to horses?

Declarer Wins Praise for Fine Playing of Hand

Make Grand Slam by Shrewd Discard on Very First Trick.

By Ely Culbertson

"DEAR MR. CULBERTSON: I enclose a hand which was played at the International Bridge League's congress at Oslo, Norway, last year. As you will see, the hand involves careful planning at the first trick, and I consider that it was exceptionally well played. You may not agree with me, but here it is:
South dealer.
"Match-point duplicate.
"Both sides vulnerable."

4 no trump	Pass	4 no trump	Pass	4 no trump	Pass	4 no trump	Pass
7 spades	Pass	7 spades	Pass	7 spades	Pass	7 spades	Pass

"At the particular table I was 'kibitzing,' the bidding went as follows:
South: 3 spades, 4 no trump, 7 spades.
West: Pass, Pass, Pass.
North: 3 spades, 4 no trump, 7 spades.
East: Pass, Pass, Pass.
"Obviously, after South located spade support and two aces in his partner's hand, a grand slam became an odds-on chance. Actually, as you will note, it could have been defeated by West's guessing to open a club, which East would have ruffed, but I know you will agree that such a guess would have bordered on the occult. West actually led the king of hearts, and who can blame him?"

"It was declarer's choice of discards on the blank heart ace that is the entire point of this deal. Am I wrong, or unduly cynical, in feeling that most players would thoughtlessly let go a lone diamond from the South hand? I don't think so. But this declarer was made of sterner stuff. He did not even put his finger on a diamond. He thought for a moment and then made the much shrewder and sounder discard of the club 10. After that, of course, it was an easy matter to collect 13 tricks. The adverse trumps were drawn in one lead each, the A-K-Q of clubs were cashed. Declarer must have had quite a thrill when he found that his club discard on the heart ace had been absolutely necessary; that if he had let go a diamond he now would have a sure club loser. As it was, after cashing the three top clubs, all he had to do was return to dummy with a diamond or a trump and ruff one club in order to establish discard. —R. K. P., Edinburgh, Scotland."

I agree fully with my correspondent's enthusiasm and with his suspicions. The crucial play, although supremely simple, would escape the notice of all but careful players and, for that very reason, the actual declarer deserved congratulations. There was absolutely nothing to lose by discarding the club ten, but most of us would not give the matter a second thought. We would jump to the conclusion that our club was solid and that we had better get rid of that little diamond in a hurry.

After all, the essence of beauty in bridge, as in almost everything, is simplicity, and this hand proves that.

Chicken Livers on Toast
A delightful delicacy for the guest who is served breakfast in her room. Melt one tablespoon butter in a saucepan and add onion juice, one teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Cut three chicken livers into pieces, dust with flour and saute in the sauce until done. Add to the sauce one cup hot chicken stock that has been thickened with flour and butter rubbed to a paste. Stir until smooth and serve on hot buttered toast.

Healthy children work happily enough. They have their off days, their spells of waywardness, all in the day's routine. But alluring children, tired children, children born short in any particular, must have special consideration and special care. School, home, all that concerns them, must be adjusted to their needs. Otherwise one sweeps the sea with a broom.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

In that last lovely week of November, with pure white snow covering the city, hanging on the trees like fleecy blankets, Peg hadn't thought anything more about the card which she had taken out of Nadeja's gold chateleine. It had floated around her room, more or less . . . on a table, in a drawer, on the mantel. She had put it finally in the wide compartment of the old maple wigstand in her room, thinking that some time she'd tell Duncan what she had done and ask him what he thought about it. But so many things had happened that week. She forgot the card.

First, Duncan had been found drunk and would give no explanation for it. Hewitt had come that next morning, had held her in his arms and had asked her to marry him.

There had been night school and several girls up from Richmond. Aunt Mehale had her Dames meeting, which had meant a full day of housecleaning and cookie baking and sandwich making.

And there had been a Thanksgiving dinner with Anthony sitting across the table from her. At first he had declined Aunt Mehale's invitation, but when she had called again and said that a Thanksgiving dinner was just no dinner at all without a man to carve the turkey, that Hewitt was dining that day at a brokers' banquet, he had accepted.

Peg hadn't wanted to be alone with Anthony that night, but some- how Joan and Aunt Mehale had disappeared together and there she was with Anthony's blue eyes on her, with his mouth smiling in a sort of hurt tenderness.

He didn't stay long. They talked of a few completely safe topics. Then he got into his big coat and stood there in the hall, twirling the snap-brim felt in his fingers. "Try to talk some bat's brains into Joan, will you, Peg?" he said evenly. "That job of hers is pretty tough going. Eight to six. On her feet all day. She's still a growing girl. Needs rest and outdoor exercise."

He paused and smiled a little. "It'll be a hard assignment for you, of course. I understand Duncan took her to a club one night and to the movies another. On the strength of that, you probably won't be able to blast her out."

Then he was gone, closing the door softly behind him. She had stood there a long time, not looking at anything in particular. Just feeling his heart break; knowing that he loved her, knowing that there wasn't anything she could do about it.

Mr. Nelson did want Peg back in the office. And Hewitt had insisted that she return. The first

SYNOPSIS
YESTERDAY'S ACTION
While Peg was in his arms, Hewitt's memory rushed over the previous days. He had been glad that Peg had left the office, for his ambition to become a moneyed man was growing. He had gone to look at a place where he intended to build a house. But he had remembered that Nadeja was becoming more insistent with him. Finally, he rushed to Peg's home, he held her and asked her to marry him, and Peg consented. They went back into the living room and told Aunt Mehale. Anthony, who had come in, stood silent for a moment; then rushed from the house. Peg and Hewitt had tentatively fixed the wedding date for the coming spring.

morning, when Peg sat behind her desk, Mr. Nelson had said, gruffly: "Well, for some one who was on the verge of death you look down-right buxom, Peg. Just what sort of a temperamental jag was that, young lady?"

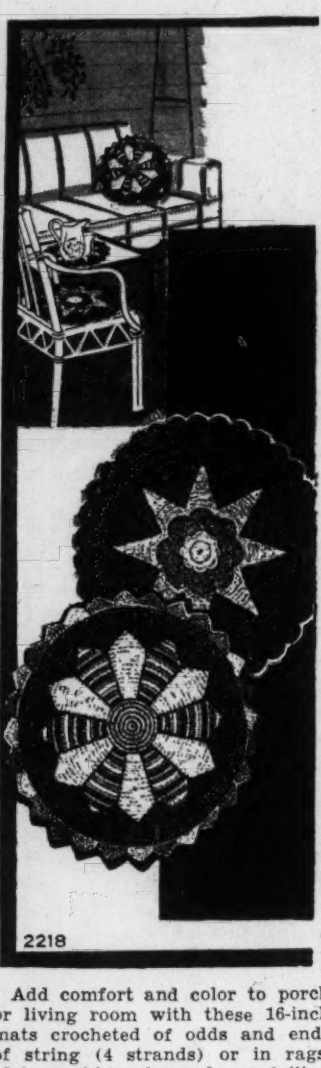

"Well, by jinks, it had better not," Mr. Nelson had told her, might put up with such nonsense, but you can bet your best red-topped boots that Hewitt Gill won't. Beginning tomorrow he's one of the partners around here, Peg. His eyes had narrowed then, waiting for her reaction.

She asked breathlessly, "Does Hewitt know?"

"Nope. Not yet. But I'm going to tell him in a few minutes. And watch him strut. These young squirts make me sick, really." No, she hadn't thought of Nadeja at all that week. She was surprised that morning in the office waiting for Hewitt to come in so he could hear what Mr. Nelson had to tell him, to glance at a newspaper and read that Count Paul Stranyan, who was assaulted just a few hundred yards from his home, had been unconscious for a week. It was improving at Emergency Hospital.

Mr. Nelson did want Peg back in the office. And Hewitt had insisted that she return. The first

The Weather Declares
It's "Open Season"
for Picnics

Yes, it's time to get out in the woods with a well stocked picnic hamper. What other phrase suggests as much fun as the familiar saying: "Having a perfect picnic!" And when food taste so good as out in the open with the perfume of flowers and music of bees to complete its enjoyment?

Picnic foods are particularly easy to prepare when you call on the resources of fresh Pevely Products. For instance, potato salad made with Pevely Creamed Salad Dressing.

Pick-ups for picnics

HOT POTATO SALAD

- 10 medium potatoes
- 4 medium onions
- 6 slices bacon
- 1/2 cup vinegar
- 2 tablespoons Pevely Butter
- 1 teaspoon mustard
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 cup Pevely Creamed Salad Dressing

Cook potatoes in skins. Dice while hot. Fry bacon crisp and chop into tiny bits. Slice onion very thin and combine these three ingredients. Heat vinegar and butter to the boiling point and add salt, sugar, mustard, paprika. Pour over first mixture while both are hot. Add salad dressing and toss lightly together with salad fork and spoon.

And here's a list of inspirations for sandwich spreads:

- Orange marmalade and Pevely Creamed Cottage Cheese.
- Pevely Quaker Cheese, chopped nuts.
- Chopped chicken, crushed pineapple, Pevely Creamed Cottage Cheese, dressing.
- Sardines, hard cooked eggs, Pevely Creamed Salad Dressing.
- Pevely Creamed Cottage Cheese, stuffed olives, parsley.
- Pevely Creamed Cottage Cheese, strawberry jam, grated raw apple, chopped egg, tuna fish, Pevely Creamed Salad Dressing.

CCC YOUTH SEIZED
HERE CONFESSES
MURDER IN BUTTE

Robert Anthony Smith, 20,
Admits That He Beat O
K. Wickizer to Death
With Hob-Nailed Shoe.

TRACED BY FBI
BY HIS SIGNATURE

Trail Followed From Mont
tana to Carrollton, Ill. to Leroy and Then to Jefferson Barracks.

Robert Anthony Smith, who killed and robbed a man in a Butte (Mont.) hotel last October after the man had given him a ride in his automobile, was found early today in a civilian conservation camp at Jefferson Barracks after a long and arduous search by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation who had checked thousands of signatures of CCC enrollees.

Smith, 20 years old, was registered at the camp as Robert Smith.
He readily admitted the murder and was taken to the city jail awaiting return to Montana.

The search for him began after his picture had been identified as that of the last person seen with K. C. Wickizer, whose body, with the skull crushed, was found in Butte hotel on Oct. 20, 1938.
Wickizer had been robbed of a automobile and $6.

It was surmised that Smith had come East in Wickizer's car to apply for entry at a CCC camp. The FBI then began a diligent check of all CCC application cards. It was finally found that Smith had been signed up at a camp at Carrollton, Ill., last January. Subsequently he had been transferred to a camp at Leroy, Ill., and then to Jefferson Barracks.

In a statement to Gerald Norrie, agent in charge of the St. Louis office of the FBI, Smith said that he had been picked up by Wickizer, who was 44 years old, in Helena, Mont. They arrived in Butte in the late afternoon, he said, and both registered at the Arizona Hotel.

Smith said that after he had killed Wickizer by beating him with a hob-nailed shoe, he remained in the hotel room for about an hour. He then took the money out of Wickizer's wallet and his car-keys and asked the hotel attendants to bring the car.

The FBI entered the case when it became apparent that Smith had left the state and a Federal warrant was subsequently issued charging him with unlawful flight.
Smith's home is in Stockert, Mont.
The Federal agents had obtained his picture and samples of his handwriting from a coal mine at Giffen, Mont., where he had worked in the spring of 1938. The picture was identified by hotel attendants and the handwriting was linked with that on the hotel register. Then the long process of checking began.

Two Down and Both Out.
BAXTER SPRINGS, Kan., May 29
(AP).—Buck Hampton, catcher for a local semi-pro baseball team, was shot yesterday. He was shot by Leon Testerman of Joplin, Mo., who was carrying a broken gun.
